May

Dear Colleague

The past couple of months have been busy for us, but the general economic environment shows little sign of sustainable improvement despite what you read about "green shoots". There are two sets of issues arising:

- Even more emphasis is placed upon the development of cost reduction programmes that can be achieved without capital budgets (eg equipment etc) and where savings can be delivered within the same financial year. Critical to the success of this is to find a consultant who has complementary skills to an in-house team, and who knows where to look for the best return on investment. We are pleased to say we have referenced examples of such projects which we are happy to share with you.
- The dilemma facing many companies regarding the amount of effort and resource that can be allocated to Sustainability and to Environmental issues. We have a firm view that these initiatives should continue, not at any cost, but continue selectively. Look for those initiatives that will provide competitive advantage, and that contribute most to your corporate sustainability objectives. I shall be covering this subject in my conference speech next week at Sustainability Live, for more details please see below. Watch out for a summary of the paper on our web site in the coming weeks.

We are therefore delighted to announce that Click-On Logistics will once again be exhibiting at Sustainabilitylive 2009: Leading the Way to a Sustainable Future. See the section below for further news on the event.

During the event there will be a series of seminars and I shall be presenting a paper on "Sustainability in the end to end Supply Chain". I will cover the key issues and opportunities in physical supply chains, together with some interesting methodologies, approaches and some examples of best practice. The seminar takes place on 19th May in the Environmental Technology Theatre from 11.15-11.45 am.

We look forward to seeing you at the show and keeping in touch over the forthcoming months.
